WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

MATT JUUL, BOSTON FEATURES EDITOR

It's time to get spooky! Make sure to grab Thursday's Metroween issue to find out what's happening in Boston for Halloween. From costume parties to events for the kids, there's something for everyone to enjoy. If you're looking for some fun outside the Hub, don't forget to check out our ultimate guide to Salem. Also, get ready for Season 2 of "Stranger Things" with our special interview with new cast member Dacre Montgomery. Have a happy Halloween!

FEWER THAN A THIRD BACK TRUMP TAX PLAN

Fewer than a third of Americans support Donald Trump's tax-cut plan, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Tuesday, as the U.S. president went to Capitol Hill looking for Republican backing for his proposal to slash tax rates for individuals and companies. As the 2018 midterm congressional election campaigns grow nearer, the poll found that more than two-thirds of registered voters said reducing the U.S. federal budget deficit is more important than cutting taxes for the wealthy or for corporations. Trump's plan would balloon the deficit and add to the $20 trillion national debt, according to critics and independent analysts, but Republicans say the tax cuts proposed in the plan would be offset by economic growth that would generate new tax revenue.

NEW WAVE OF CYBER ATTACKS HITS RUSSIA

2 Cyberattacks using malware called "BadRabbit" hit Russia and other nations on Tuesday, affecting Russian Interfax news agency and causing flight delays at Ukraine's Odessa airport. While no major outages were reported, the U.S. government issued a warning on the attack, which followed campaigns in May and June that used similar malware and resulted in what some economists estimated are billions of dollars in losses. The attacks are disturbing because attackers quickly infected critical infrastructure, including transportation operators, indicating it was a "well-coordinated" campaign, said Robert Lipovsky, a researcher with cyber firm ESET. More than half the victims were in Russia, followed by Ukraine, Bulgaria, Turkey and Japan, according to ESET.

GOP SENATORS FIERCELY REBUKE TRUMP

3 Two Republican senators fiercely attacked President Donald Trump on Tuesday, accusing their fellow Republican of debasing U.S. politics and the country's standing abroad in extraordinary public criticisms of a sitting president. The onslaught from Jeff Flake and Bob Corker marked a sharp increase in tensions in what has been a fraught relationship between the president and congressional Republicans as Trump tries to enact his policy agenda. In a dramatic speech on the Senate floor, Flake repeatedly targeted Trump's style of governing, saying American politics had become "inured" to "reckless, outrageous and undignified" behavior from the White House. "The instinct to scapegoat and belittle threatens to turn us into a fearful, backward-looking people," said Flake, who announced he would not run for re-election next year. "I will not be complicit or silent," Flake said. By announcing he will be leaving when his term ends in early 2019, Flake has effectively freed himself up to speak his mind, without having one eye on voter reactions. Sen. Bob Corker, who has also said previously he is not running for re-election, earlier called Trump a liar who has damaged the country's standing, eviscerating the president with comments that stirred deepening divisions among Republicans. "The president has great difficulty with the truth on many issues," Corker told CNN.

TWITTER TO LABEL ELECTION ADS

4 Twitter Inc. said on Tuesday it would add labels to election-related advertisements and say who is behind each of them, after a threat of regulation from the United States over the lack of disclosure for political spending on social media. Twitter said in a blog post the company would launch a website so that people could see the identities of the buyers, targeting demographics and total ad spend by election advertisers, as well as information about all ads currently running on Twitter, election-related or otherwise. Silicon Valley social media firms and the political ads that run on their websites have generally been free of the disclaimers and other regulatory demands that U.S. authorities impose on television, radio and satellite services.

AMAZON RIVALS TURN TO LEGAL FINE PRINT

5 Whole Foods met a foe this summer during talks to lease retail space in a San Francisco mall: the Target next door. As City Center mall's largest tenant, Target had a say over changes to the property. According to people familiar with the lease discussions, Target balked at sharing the mall with Whole Foods because it feared competition from the chain's new owner, Amazon. Early attempts to persuade Target failed, and Whole Foods may now have to concede certain Amazon initiatives — such as lockers where customers can pick up goods ordered online — if it wants the location, the people said. Reuters examined real estate agreements with 20 retail landlords, lawyers and brokers show that the strings attached to operating in malls present an emerging and little-scrutinized challenge to Amazon's quest to reshape Whole Foods.

Lift and Mass. Brewers Guild partner to make craft breweries more accessible

The ride-share company and the guild are teaming up to help you try some of the state's most unique breweries.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Massachusetts is practically overflowing with breweries, and to help you try out the many pours they have to offer, the Massachusetts Brewers Guild is partnering with Lyft to offer rides, promo codes and other perks to more than 90 craft breweries across the commonwealth.

Lyft is now the official ride-share partner of the guild — a nonprofit that focuses on protecting and promoting local brewers across the state — the company announced Tuesday.

That means that Lyft will be present at upcoming beer festivals and events, and also offer special perks to beer enthusiasts as well as to the brewers themselves. Each of the 90 member breweries will get their own Lyft coupon code for new riders.

To celebrate the partnership, Lyft is offering 10 percent off rides to Massachusetts Brewers Guild member breweries, including Boston-area faves Harpoon and Nightshift as well as others outside of Greater Boston, between Oct. 24 and Oct. 29 with the code MBG17.

"Craft breweries are a huge part of Massachusetts' culture. We're excited to be the official ride-share partner of the Massachusetts Brewers Guild and to help support the brewers, employees, and patrons of the local craft beer industry," said Tyler George, general manager of Lyft New England, in a statement. "This partnership ensures everyone can enjoy craft beers and on-demand rides across Massachusetts."

With breweries popping up in every corner of the state, the partnership will also make them more safely accessible when public transportation isn't an option.

"Our mission is to drive traffic to all breweries in every nook and corner, to western mass to the lower Cape region to the northeast, so we're hoping to see a lot of traffic with this," said Katie Stinchon, executive director of the brewers guild. "Some breweries are out of reach for public transportation and not everyone has access to a car, especially our city folk. It's a natural partnership."

Breweries will also have and earn Lyft credits as another partnership perk to promote safety.

"Every taproom manager will start to accrue credits as people use the Lyft codes, so they have the ability to send someone home in a safe way, whether a staff employee or a guest," Stinchon said.

"Responsible consumption is a major focus of our efforts, and top of mind for all of our taproom managers," she added. "We want people to visit our breweries, try some of our awesome beers, get home safe and come back again."

"This partnership ensures everyone can enjoy craft beers and on-demand rides across Mass."

MBTA testing technology to speed the flow of buses, trolleys

Over the next several months, the MBTA will test a new way of prioritizing traffic signals so that, hopefully, the trains and buses get through quicker.

Over the next several months, the MBTA plans to expand its transit signal priority program along four corridors in Boston, Brookline and Cambridge to improve reliability and cut down the travel times for riders on buses and trolleys.

The ongoing pilot has given priority to trolleys at five intersections on the B, C and E branches of the Green Line, and at one intersection in Cambridge's Central Square for the Route 1 and CT1 buses.

Moving ahead, the T plans to expand signal prioritization along all of

The pilot program will prioritize the traffic signals at some intersections on the Green Line. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Massachusetts Avenue in Cambridge, Beacon Street in Brookline, and Commonwealth and Huntington avenues in Boston, Jess Casey, the MBTA's deputy chief operating officer for service planning and strategy, said Monday.

The prioritization can prolong a green light for trolleys and buses or shorten red lights affecting those transit vehicles, Casey said. The pilot has not shown any "demonstrable negative effect to general traffic," according to a presentation Casey made to the T.

Expanding the signal program on four corridors will cost about $1.125 million, with the new technology costing about $12,600 per signal, Casey said. She said Cambridge has offered to kick in about $220,000, Brookline has anted up $50,000 and the T is "working with Boston to be able to advance the conversation" around cost-sharing.

The T has worked with consultants CH2M and IBI on the project, and the MBTA owns the technology, according to Casey, who said she expects the cost per installation to go down as the program expands.

The technology senses when a bus or trolley is near a signal and then evaluates whether to hold a green light or shorten the red light for that vehicle, Casey said. Over nine days of testing the new system, prioritization was granted to B and E branch trolleys 390 times with green lights extended an average of 14 seconds and red lights shortened by eight seconds on average according to the T.

"We haven't heard any complaints or negative feedback," said Casey, describing the data from the pilot as "wonderful."

Kid Rock isn't running for Senate

Remember that bleak and brief period of time when Kid Rock seemed to be considering a Senate run? Well, don't give up on America just yet, folks: It was just a ploy to promote his album.

The Trump supporting old man told Howard Stern on Tuesday morning that it was all, in fact, an effort to drum up press for some new music that is not "Bawitdaba."

"F—k no, I'm not running for Senate,"

he told Stern on his SiriusXM radio show. "Are you kidding me? Who couldn't figure that out? I'm releasing a new album. Are you f—ing s—ing me?" I mean, isn't the real question whether or not Kid Rock was s—ing us?

Anyway, "Sweet Southern Sugar" comes out Nov. 3, if you're interested — and also you're stuck in 1998, a time where Kid Rock didn't have to make fake Senate bids in an attempt to be relevant.

the word

Chris Pratt plays nice

Anna Faris' book, "Unqualified" is hitting the shelves. And it includes a foreword from Chris Pratt — her husband of eight years from whom she recently separated.

"When I was asked to write the foreword for 'Unqualified,' Anna's memoir, I immediately said yes without even thinking about it," he writes. "And boy did a lot happen between then and now. So much. Like ... soooo much."

That would be about the separation, eh?

Pratt goes on to compliment Faris, like a good soon-to-be-ex-husband. It's super nice, man. Soooo nice.

Sooooo nice.

Amber Heard has a lover Down Under

I applaud Amber Heard. Here is a woman who is constantly getting it in, boo-wise. It doesn't matter whether or not it's cuffing season — baby is getting cuffed!

At the end of September, Heard was caught on tape sharing some aggressive mouth-to-mouth action with a mystery man in Australia. Now, Page Six reports that the dude is "hunky stuntman Mana Hira Davis." OK!

Sources tell the site that the pair — who met on set of "Aquaman" in Australia — are inseparable, which sounds over the top. Apparently, these two have been seeing each other a few months, but have been keeping things "low-key."

Heard, of course, most recently dated Elon Musk, and was once married to the human embodiment of patchouli, Johnny Depp.

Girlfriend moves at the speed of light.

The "America's Test Kitchen" stars preview this weekend's food fest.

"America's Test Kitchen" hopes to highlight its Boston roots when its new food festival debuts this weekend.

Although "ATK" has always called the Hub its home, culinary stars Bridget Lancaster and Julia Collin Davison note that fans often forget that. The co-hosts of the popular cooking show tell Metro they believe the Boston Eats event will help reintroduce the brand to the local food scene.

"We've been on the air a long time, people know the magazine, but people had no idea we were in Boston," Davison says. "Joining us with local restaurants and inviting people into our new space, it's kind of like a 'we've arrived' party. It's nice not to be hidden anymore."

Organizers are going all out for Boston Eats, which takes over the "ATK" headquarters and studios in the Seaport on Oct. 27-28. The fest will feature three sessions, where attendees will get the chance to watch cooking demonstrations, munch on dishes prepared by some of the area's top restaurants, as well as receive a behind-the-scenes look at the new test kitchen.

"No other food festival will take you behind the scenes of a TV show," Davison says.

Chef Michael Schlow joins "ATK" for Taste of Innovation. MOVIEGO

The festivities kick off on Friday night with Taste of Innovation. Hosted by Lancaster and Davison, the tasting party will pair some of Boston's best chefs with "ATK" test cooks to create innovative recipes using local ingredients. Chefs Michael Schlow, Jeremy Sewall, Matt Jennings and more are expected to participate.

The fun continues Saturday with Backstage "ATK," the ultimate behind-the-scenes experience at the "ATK" 55,000-square foot facility. Attendees will receive a guided tour of the new kitchens and studios, as well as participate in taste tests, a book signing with Lancaster and Davison and more.

While each of the sessions requires separate tickets, fans who attend Backstage "ATK" will also have access to the main Boston Eats event on Saturday, which will include cooking demonstrations, interactive exhibits, plus tastings from more than 40 of New England's top restaurants, such as Area Four, SRV, Citizen Public House & Oyster Bar, Post 390 and Saltie Girl.

Lancaster hopes the two-day affair will help foster more of a connection between "ATK" and Boston's vibrant food scene.

"We have a wide range of chefs offering a lot of different cuisine," Lancaster says. "But it's not just about cooking food for the public. It's really about making that connection."

FANTASY FOOTBALL ADVICE

BILL DUBIEL

Bill Dubiel is a fantasy football expert and lead NFL columnist for Rotoballer.com.

Fantasy football advice heading into Week 8 of the 2017 NFL season.

Send in McCown

No fantasy writer expected anything out of the New York Jets this year and if they tell you different, they're lying. Here we are in Week 8, and the Jets are still hanging around in the playoff hunt at 3-4. While it's certainly not realistic to think that they'll actually make the playoffs, it appears that Josh McCown can be a viable fantasy asset despite having a roster of no-names around him.

The 38-year-old journeyman has been terrific over the last few weeks, piling up seven passing touchdowns and one rushing touchdown in his last three games. McCown has been a career backup for good reason — he simply isn't that talented — but he gets the Atlanta Falcons this week in a game in which he'll have to throw to keep up. A 250-yard, 2-3 touchdown game is a reasonable expectation, and with six teams on a bye McCown could be the bye week fill-in that you need to get by.

Moore Stills

Kenny Stills is coming off a game in which he set season-highs in catches, yards and touchdowns, finishing with a 6-85-2 stat line. A majority of his production, including both late scores, came with Matt Moore under center, filling in for the injured

Jay Cutler. Moore and Stills have a history of success together as well. In the four games Matt Moore played in last year, Stills received nearly a quarter of all targets (23.5 percent). Stills has always been a big-play threat, even dating back to his days in New Orleans, so he should be the one Moore looks at with all of his shots downfield. On top of that, the Dolphins play Thursday night, meaning DeVante Parker will have less time to heal from an ankle injury that has kept him out the last two weeks. With only Jarvis Landry to compete with for touches, Stills should be in for another big game against the beatable Ravens secondary.

Doubting Thomas

When Peyton Manning was under center for the Broncos in the early 2010s, Demaryius Thomas was one of the most consistently explosive fantasy players in the game. Since then, he has seen his production steadily drop off. In fact, Thomas has not scored a touchdown in any of his last 12 regular season games (dating back to 2016). This can largely be chalked up to the inconsistent, if not downright erratic play of Trevor Siemian. In recent weeks, Thomas' performance has bottomed out, highlighted by a two-catch, nine-yard performance in Week 7. While it would seem that the absence of Emmanuel Sanders would have helped Thomas' production, it did the opposite. The opposing defense was able to key in on Thomas and shut him down completely. Until we see some sort of drastic change in his consistency, Thomas is no more than a WR3, and it'll be tough to justify starting him outside of needing a bye-week fill-in.

Tyler Eifert is still on the shelf, and Kroft has provided modest, yet consistent value. He has at least four catches in each of his last three games, with three touchdowns over that time period.

Marion Mack, RB, Colts
Robert Turbin is out for the season, leaving Mack as the primary complement to Frank Gore in the Indy running game. He should be rostered in every league given his ability to contribute both on the ground and in the passing game.

Aries Go with the flow no matter what happens. Reach out with understanding and compassion to find a way to overcome any dilemma that crops up.

Taurus Travel and communication are highlighted. Associating with people from different backgrounds will be eye-opening. Collaboration will help you find solutions.

Gemini Get whatever job is expected of you out of the way. Look for alternative ways to use your skills, qualifications and experience to get ahead.

Cancer If you share your thoughts and emotions, you will resolve issues that have been bothering you. A business trip or conference will lead to a window of opportunity.

Leo Don't raise your temper. Keep your promises, but don't feel you must go above and beyond the call of duty to please others. Take time to relax and pamper yourself.

Virgo Have alternative ideas ready if someone opposes what you want to do. Your strength will come from well-laid plans and the gumption to see matters through.

Libra You'll find it difficult to deal with peers or relatives. Don't get into an emotional dispute. You are best off letting matters settle before you address issues.

Scorpio Clear a space at home or make a move that is conducive to following a lifelong dream. Travel, education and communication will help you reach your goal.

Sagittarius If you want to draw attention to something you believe in, you must take action. If you have an important presentation coming up, make sure it's visually captivating.

Capricorn Get down to business and don't leave anything unfinished. Your precision and attention to detail will be impressive and will help you gain respect and confidence.

Aquarius Get along with others and get things done. Avoid overspending or making unrealistic promises. Live up to your own expectations, not to the expectations of others.

Pisces A schedule that will allow you to explore your options is favored. Change may entice you, but know what you are getting into before you take flight. EUGENIA LAST
